

I would like to comment on verizon's petition to delay phone number portability in the wireless phone industry. I do not support this proposal. The inability to retain one's phone number when switching carriers is a major impediment to competition. One is more likely to shop for a new wireless carrier for a better deal if he can retain his current phone number. The inability to do so is a boon to the wireless carriers at the expense of increased service and choice for consumers.